

Occupy Movement Bears Fruit

RETHINKING DEBT

Resistance to Stop and Frisk

For years, the NYPD has routinely profiled black and Latino youth. Relentless Occupy organizing around this issue has done much to raise awareness.

Foreclosure Resistance

Local Occupy chapters around the nation are stepping in to help people stay in their homes.

Strike Debt

Through debtors' assemblies, education campaigns, and brainstorming, Strike Debt is working to abolish debt. Their first action: a free, downloadable text, the Debt Resistor's Operation Manual.

JOINING FORCES

Defending Public Schools

Parents who had been fighting for years to resist the privatization of public schools found allies in Occupy, which came to their aid in New York, Washington, D.C., and elsewhere.

Solidarity with Unions

Often, Occupiers can picket a business when workers who fear losing their jobs cannot. This type of action helped workers at a Manhattan pizzeria called Hot & Crusty win a union. The movement has also supported Chicago teachers during their strike.

Occupy Monsanto

Although food issues can't be pinned down to any one location, that hasn't stopped Occupy Monsanto. They have actions planned for 60 cities on 8/17, with more to come.

OCCUPYING THE ISSUES

Occupy the Hood

With more than 20 chapters from Orlando to Tacoma, Occupy the Hood works to raise up the profile of people of color within the movement.

Networks

Occupy produced new networks that allow activists from around the United States and the world to more easily collaborate and stay informed.

- Occupy Cafe (>occupycafe.org)

MEDIA

Magazines & Websites

While some of the movement's media projects have disappeared, many more are still around, and growing.

ONGOING ENCAMPMENTS

Honolulu, Harrisburg, Fresno

Think the era of encampments is over? Think again. Occupations in these three cities outlasted the evictions.

One Year Later...

For many who participate in Occupy Wall Street, it's hard to believe the whole thing started just one year ago.
